

Making College Affordable

“Singing the praises of National College Planners”

My wife and I originally met with Jason with the idea of trying to save money, and to help with the application process (a real mystery for us).

We received much more than we bargained for.

He got to know our daughter so well he was able to make recommendations for schools that were a good match for her. So often kids (and parents) are overly concerned/obsessed with a school's name or image and not whether the school is a good fit or not. (How many kids switch schools, waste time and money or end up dropping out altogether?)

Jason took over the entire application process, removing what is often a rather contentious and stressful issue between kids and their parents and he made sure the applications were filled out properly. That was a real relief.

Jason was also invaluable in helping to reduce the expense, offering advice and tips we would never have found out on our own. With this very helpful information he helped our daughter receive over $35,000 in scholarships, grants, and loans in a time frame of two years; a large portion of that being free money that she doesn't have to pay back! There really is so much aid available out there for families, such as ours, who need it and deserve it but don't know how to look for it.

The ongoing support is a bonus, and really valuable to our daughter.

We need to face the facts. The cost of education is an obscenity, and the complexity of the process is abusive. Without the expert help of Jason and the staff at NCP, we would be sheep to slaughter. None of us can imagine going through this without him.

Gratefully,

Brian Ordelheide
